

Mari Blomqvist

Think big, Feel great, Act in your way

Overview

Mari is a passionate developer who wants to help people find their full potential in different areas of life and in different situations. During her career she has noticed human behaviour is the same wherever you go: We want to be listened to and appreciated. We want to belong to a group. And we want to know what's going to happen next. Her coaching style combines systemic thinking, neuroscience, work psychology and NLP.

She started her career as a work psychological researcher, following which she was an HRD professional for the food industry, before her passion for people development led to her moving into coaching and training. She works with individuals and groups to nourish their thinking, emotions and actions to reach their goals.
